Archaeon

By Angelo LT Ilersich

Archaeon, my spirit, my mend
Alike me; we share in our wants
Archaeon, in sweet vulcan glen
I loved you, and yet you knew nought.

Your home was not always so far
You always out-tested our reach
You crave for yourself all the stars
Like you never left Loki's black beach.

Archaeon, whom next will you reign
Enrapture with breath, until flame
Archaeon, you feed from their slain
Ancient pumps drawing no fuel from shame.

No wash cleans your prints from a film
On cue, you are always the same
Archaeon, it's my whole you fill
Archaeon, you're partly to blame.

Archaeon, my system, my bend
We lived well, or so I had thought
Archaeon, I speak as a friend
To love, I need what you cannot.
